

Paradise Found

luxury goes outdoors

With the warm weather upon us, who wants to be inside — ever? Pictured here and on page 54 are two wonderful outdoor “rooms,” proof positive that you don’t have to trade luxury or comfort just because you’re no longer inside. Take a look and then plan your perfect outdoor spot.

When Peggy and Hugh Quigley saw the panoramic views of the Hudson and its surrounding mountains 37 years ago, they were sold. Since then, they’ve worked with designer Tim Albright and builder Shane Pilato to continue to expand their corner of paradise. The large sideboard piece in the poolhouse had its first life in a barn. The lamps on top of the sideboard are made from newel porch posts, while the glider sofa is from Country Casual. The coffee table chest was saved from demise by Albright; Hugh replaced the top. Overhead hanging lights are from City Lights in Catskill.

A short walk from the pool is a wonderfully appointed outdoor kitchen and dining pavillion, built by Vermont Timber Frame of Cambridge. The stainless steel refrigerator and "kegerator" (aka beer tap for those who've forgotten their dorm years) are Viking Professional while the grill is a GE Monogram. All were purchased through Ackerman's Appliances in Hudson. The pavillion features a table from Arthur Lauer (formerly called Wood Classics). Hugh built all the cabinetry in the pavillion as well as the Adirondack chairs that sit poolside overlooking the scenic view. Albright did all the design work and Pilato, owner of North Country Landscapes, constructed the pool building. Pilato also planted all the Quigleys' gardens.
